EDITORIAL

WHEN

With the problem of the farmer persistently remaining before the public eye, the following quotation from Henry W. Grady is as forceful today as when uttered in 1889.

When every farmer in the South shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures, and cultivated by no credit hoe, and endowed by no debt, shall devote enough to growing gardens and orchards, and vineyards, and his canning, and her cards, pitching his crops in his own wisdom, and growing this in independence, making cotton his clean surplus and selling it by no one time in his chosen market, and not a man's bidding; getting his pay in cash and not in a receipted mortgage that discharges the debt but does not restore his freedom; then shall he breathe the fullness of our day."

A COUNTY MUSEUM FOR APPOMATTOX

Middlesex county, Virginia, has taken the lead in establishing a county MUSEUM at its court house, where local historical documents and relics may be preserved and exhibited.

APPOMATTOX NEEDS A COUNTY MUSEUM, TOO

It should be located at the old court house, and included Pa at features of the proposed national military park now to become a reality.

Perhaps the old county jail at the old court house could be used for this purpose. Its walls are sturdy and it is not used for any other purpose. A canvas of the county should be made, to secure furniture of the time of the Surrender, and these pieces placed in the Museum So far as possible, a minute search should be made for any and all objects and heirlooms connected with the period of the War Between the States for the Museum. Confederate flags would be found, uniforms, pistols, guns, shells, sabres, and a careful search made for all possible papers, commissions, etc. It should not just be county wide, but national in its scope. Families of veterans all over the nation should be given an opportunity to cooperate.

We urge that plans for a historical Museum be given prominence in the current project. If the McLean home is rebuilt, that, of course, should be the focal point.

Every Virginia court house has its lore, but none more sacred than Appomattox. The glory that is past should not be forgotten, but preserved as a constant reminder to succeeding generations.

LOOKS LIKE WAR

Italian troops continue to pour into Ethiopia War looms virtually as a certainty. Other nations may become embroiled. England and Japan will doubtless protect their commercial interests in Africa Once more, WESTERN INTERESTS dominant, the sacrifice of thousands of lives. 1914 is being restaged.

The sympathy of the world will be to Ethiopia American foreign policy may have to be recast. Can we remain neutral if all Europe is ignited again?

We presume that an attitude of watchful waiting will be followed by the United States As the "Rainy season" draws to an end, European and African dateliners will be scanned more closely than ever.

IN WASHINGTON

Visitors in Washington discover endless, places and objects of interest and many odd facts.

Just inside the State, War and Navy buildings is a memorial to the 68,082 horses and mules killed in service during the World War.

Several trees planted by George Washington still stand, but they are not marked as such for fear of souvenir hunters.

There is $400,000 worth of aluminum in the appurtenances of the new Department of Justice building.

There are over a million volumes in the library of the Army Medical Building.

There are no less than five police departments in Washington: city, park, zoo, capitol and public buildings.

The White House was not always white, but was so painted after it was burned by the British in 1814.

There are just a few of the interesting things a visitor to Washington may see. You can't take it all in on one visit. Go there at every opportunity.

American Oil Co. Builds

New Storage Plant Adds Importance To Port Of Albany

Plans have been completed and work has recently started, on what will be one of the largest oil terminals in the Port of Albany. The terminal site, recently purchased by the American Oil Company, covers forty acres in East Greenbush, New York, South of Albany, on Papscanee Island. This new plant will be modern in every detail and a great contribution to the importance of the Port of Albany.

American Oil Company will ship its products in large tankers from its new refinery at Texas City, Texas, the world's largest and most modern refining unit, directly to the terminal when completed. Tankers approximately 450 feet long having a 60 foot beam and carrying 2,500,000 gallons of American Oil Company products per trip will be used. Construction plans call for a dock and unloading facilities capable of handling the largest tankers.

Storage facilities will be large enough to take care of American Oil Company's present and rapidly increasing business in upper New York state, Vermont and Western Massachusetts Tanks and building will be completed and in operation before January 1, 1936. Modern facilities for loading and unloading tankers, barges, tank-cars, and trucks will be a part of American's new and modern terminal.

How your MONEY WORKS FOR YOU IN A Checking Account

When you put your money in a savings account you get interest on it. In a checking account you get service for it—and let the bank draw the interest. In return for this interest the bank gives you privileges worth far more to you than the interest itself.

When you maintain a balance commensurate with your use of your checking account privileges, the bank will be reimbursed for the expense of serving you. Otherwise, the bank may properly look to you to meet this expense.

Money in a checking account is an investment that pays you real dividends.

Properly Stowed Bags Add to Comfort

Comfort, pleasure, and safety on a tour depend largely on efficient loading of the luggage, and modern body designs have done much to ease the problem, as these views of Chevrolet models reveal. In the upper left view, the suitcases have been fitted in snugly, the adjustable front seat having been moved forward to allow extra leeway, and the driver is now pushing back the seat to clamp the bags in place for the day. Upper right, the tourist is utilizing the baggage space back of the rear seat. The two lower pictures show the loading of a coupe compartment and a sedan trunk.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Take Children's Pictures Now

Pictures like these will lend enchantment to your "Memory Album."

FROM many members of the Snapshot Guild have taken snapshots this summer of their children? It would be interesting to know for so few parents realize the importance of keeping what might be called a "Memory Album"—fascinating, story-telling pictures of their children.

The two pictures above are excellent examples of story-telling pictures—the kind you should strive to take for your "Memory Album." They were taken on just such a day as we hope to have tomorrow—sunshine and bright skies. Mother snapped little Billie as he was making a vain effort to sweep the front walk while Jane was apparently pleasure-bound with her toy dog and dolls. Aren't they real story-telling snapshots?

Suppose that you want to snap a picture of your little son or daughter playing or "working" in the yard. This is what you should do.

First of all don't try to get the child to pose, for the chances are he will appear in a stiff, unnatural position in the finished picture. Let him become busily engaged in whatever he is doing and then rather nonchalantly get as near to him as possible with your camera. If you have a box camera you should not be closer than eight feet. Have the camera (if it is of the box type) set at the "snap" or less opening; and, you are ready to "shoot" the minute your child unintentionally or accidentally, if he is a good actor—assumes an interesting pose or position. Be sure all of him shows in the finder or else he may appear in the finished print minus his head or feet.

Here's another simple precaution. The shutter on a box camera operates at a speed of approximately 1/25 of a second. This is not fast enough to stop action when the camera is close to the subject so in taking the picture of your child wait until that moment when he is not in motion before snapping the picture for otherwise the image will be blurred.

If you have a folding camera with a footage scale you can work as close as six feet to your subject and get a larger image. Set the diaphragm control pointer at f.11 or if it is quite shady, at f.8. Set the shutter speed indicator at 1/25 of a second or number twenty-five. Locate the child in the finder and snap the picture.

Don't have the sun striking the child in the face and then expect him not to squint. Let the light come across his face and you will get interesting shadows and show all features much better. Action will be no squinting.

Those Little Green Globes

PEAS to you—or peas to anybody who appreciates what constantly discovered, in these which taste. They pop up to be picked in light or dark green pods to taste both sweet and starchy anywhere you find them—canned peas to vitamin-filled little green globes.

Be it your aim to maintain that enviable slenderness or to do a hot dog impression, peas are in the dishing your choice we say canned peas to vitamin-filled the tiny ones as a medium and pods. It reserve the larger, to size, to dinner size and so.

Here Are Some Recipes

Cauliflower and Peas Salad: Boil sufficient cauliflower to measure 2 cups of the cauliflowerets. Cook until tender but not soft. Cook separately for same time, one cup of canned peas and one can of asparagus tips. Then toss lightly together the peas and cauliflower and pile on crisp lettuce. Arrange the asparagus tips around the edge, and garnish with mayonnaise. This serves eight persons.

Pea Oysters: Press sufficient canned peas through a sieve to obtain one cup of pea pulp. Add one tablespoon melted butter, a few drops of onion juice and the following sifted dry ingredients: one-fourth cup flour, one-fourth teaspoon baking powder, three-fourths teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Add one well-beaten egg yolk and fold in the stiffly-beaten white. Drop by small spoonfuls in hot deep fat (374-390 degrees) and fry until golden brown. Drain and serve with the meat course, either plain or with white sauce. This serves eight persons.

The Cream Of Ice-Creams

WHEN the French want to express the fact that something is particularly fine they speak of it as "the cream of the cream". That's a vivid expression, but not too vivid to express the satisfaction to be found in really fine ice-creams.

Your summer fetes will be more festive if you learn the ways of modern mousses and parfaits and other frozen creams, and also the new ways of serving them. Introduce them at your porch parties in pretty frilled paper cups, or piled high in colorful parfait glasses. Here are two that will make the dessert social register:

They're Cooling Too

Mocha Mousse: Add one-fourth cup of strong coffee to the contents of one 15½-ounce can of chocolate syrup. Beat two cups of cream so that it does not become too stiff, and two tablespoons confectioners sugar and then mix with the chocolate. Freeze in refrigerator trays or in an ice and salt mixture. Or the mousse may be potured into individual paper cases, then placed in the freezing trays or in a container of ice and salt. This serves eight persons.

Pear and Strawberry Parfait: Add sufficient water to the syrup from one cup of canned pears to make two cups of liquid. Bring to boiling, pour over one package of lime gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add the pears, diced, and pour into eight tall glasses. Set in the refrigerator to harden. When ready to serve, beat one cup of cream, add three tablespoons confectioners sugar, one-fourth cup of crumbled macaroons and one-fourth cup of sliced fresh strawberries. Pile on top of the gelatin. Do not beat the cream too stiff. This serves eight persons.
